Dr. Paul Cady named dean of ISU College of Pharmacy

Paul Cady, Ph.D., has been named the eleventh dean to serve at the helm of the Idaho State University College of Pharmacy. Dean Cady, who has been serving as Interim Dean since Dr. Joseph Steiner left the position about a year ago, has been with the College since 1990.

“It is a pleasure to be serving the faculty, staff and students at the College of Pharmacy,” Dean Cady said. “I truly believe we are at the forefront of pharmacy education in the U.S. and have proven this through our exceptional students and alumni. We are all dedicated to the success of our students and the future of Idaho’s college of pharmacy.”

During his tenure with the College, Dean Cady has served held numerous administrative positions including Associate Dean, Director of the Pharmacy Administration Graduate Program and as Vice Chair in the Department of Pharmacy Practice and Administrative Sciences. He was a recipient of the Rufus A. Lyman Award from the American Associations of Colleges of Pharmacy in 1998. Along with others at the College of Pharmacy, he has been involved with the Idaho Medicaid Drug Utilization Review project; specifically with data management and research. His research interests include population based drug utilization review and pharmacoeconomics. He also has served on the board of the Idaho Pharmacists Association.

Dean Cady earned his B.S. in pharmacy in 1980 from the University of Arizona. After serving with the Indian Health Service in 1984 he returned to the University of Arizona and earned his M.S and Ph.D. in pharmacy administration.

Dean Cady went on to serve as a faculty member at the University of Tennessee College of Pharmacy for two years prior his appointment to the Idaho State University College of Pharmacy faculty 1990.

Dean Cady and his wife, Merriann, are the parents of five children and seven grandchildren.

The College of Pharmacy is the oldest college at ISU and was established in 1918 as the Division of Pharmacy at the Idaho Technical Institute, later named Idaho State University.
Alumni Spotlight:

Ray Emery’s career has included pharmacy practice and grape farming in California vineyards

When Ray Emery graduated from the Idaho State University College of Pharmacy in 1972, he wasn’t a traditional student at the time. The then 40-year-old student was the father of four children and had attended college in Sacramento in his home state.

Although he says many of his classmates were much younger, they elected him as their senior class president. Some of those classmates he remains friends with today.

Following graduation, Emery returned to California where he worked in the profession for several years. In addition to a career in pharmacy, he also studied viticulture at Napa Valley Junior College, and went on to practice in the field as the owner of two vineyards in the Golden State. Today, he and his wife, Harriett reside in Lakeport, Calif., about 125 miles northwest of the capitol city of Sacramento.

In 1991, Ray retired from the pharmacy profession, but continued his vineyard work. He also has been working on writing the biographies of his and Harriett’s families.

Other hobbies include the restoration of automobiles, fly fishing and genealogy, he said.

Ray and Harriett are the parents of four children, Deborah, Jon, Sherry and Mark.
